

Thank You Summer Academy!

The first few weeks in Summer Academy was extremely challenging and stressful for both Veng Yan and her parents. Daddy has to apply time-off from work to accompany her to classes. Later, her anxiety slowly subsided, thanks to the patience and sincerity of the educator-partners of Summer Academy in making learning fun. Gradually, Veng Yan started to look forward to school, became independent and can't wait to tell stories of things she learnt in school and her fun time mixing with other children.

She is full of praises for her teachers in Summer Academy who have taught her to speak and write in the 3 key languages – English, Bahasa Malaysia and Chinese, conduct classroom activities that assist her in exploring her creativity, understanding teamwork, etc. We are often in awe of her progress in speaking the 3 languages, her ability in presenting her thoughts or opinion on things she observed, her self-discipline and creativity. Most important of all, she is eager to pick-up new knowledge and able to post questions when she has doubts.

I chanced upon Summer Academy through the internet when I was looking for a kindergarten for Veng Yan. What caught my eye was what Summer Academy believed in and has to offer – that early education for children is about developing a child not only academically but just as important to develop the creativity, ability to think and well being of a child! We liked how Summer Academy balances both.

We truly appreciate the attention and care each teacher gives to Veng Yan and all other children. We are delighted to see that each teacher and staff of Summer Academy is doing what they are doing not because it is just a job but because they really like to work with children and have the best interest of the children at heart.

We are happy with the progress that Veng Yan is making but more importantly we are grateful that she is truly happy to go to school. We have always hoped that Veng Yan will enjoy her learning experiences; and with Summer Academy, it looks like Veng Yan is really enjoying the whole learning experience.

A very big thank you to each and everyone at Summer Academy!

Thank You !

Warmest wishes,
Veng Yan's daddy, mummy & family.
